Irish Ancestry Research

If like me you have Irish ancestors in the family, then you must have encountered the same problems with your research that I have. We can get back to the 1800s when they left Ireland and came to Birmingham however, it's difficult to find records in Ireland before they crossed the Irish sea, the 1841 census just records that they were born in Ireland and when I did find their English marriage certificates and later censuses, all I found was Roscommon and Galway.

This month I have attached my recent research guidance note on 'The History of Census in Ireland' for those of you interested in Irish records and if any U3A genealogy/family history group members with Irish connections have found helpful ways of locating your long lost family, I would be pleased to hear from you.

Now, good news came by way of an email last month from the free online monthly genealogy magazine; 'GenealogyInTime' - it's back with all the interesting information on family history research, and the usual up-to-the-minute newest genealogy records that have come available from the numerous websites in the last month. If you don't already subscribe to this free monthly newsletter, you should at www.genealogyintime.com

Finally for this year, I want to wish you all "Seasons Greetings" and of course, a healthy, peaceful and prosperous New Year....
